

Why Select the Financial Services Concentration

Financial Services, a challenging and dynamic stream in the Faculty of Management, offers reality based courses in cultivating sound and solid financial knowledge for a wide range of career opportunities. The curriculum covers areas of:

- corporate finance
- banking and insurance
- investment management
- investment banking
- personal financial planning
- international finance
- real estate

A good balance between the theoretical framework and practical knowledge is the main emphasis of this concentration's design. Students will receive a broad exposure to up-to-date financial concepts prior to tackling challenges in their chosen profession, as well as lifelong personal financial needs.

The job market for finance students is broad and ever-growing. Our graduates are working domestically and internationally as bank managers, funding specialists, mutual fund agents, financial planners and advisors, real estate brokers, investment brokers and analysts, security traders, insurance brokers, and corporate financial officers. Many of them have achieved professional designations which are recognized globally.

We have an excellent teaching team. Faculty are either Ph.D. holders with tremendous scholarly experience or industry professionals possessing sturdy applied skills. Being supportive and practical in teaching, our faculty are greatly admired by students.

Internationalization is another prominent characteristic of this program. An excellent cultural mix of students and faculty allows exploration of security markets, financial institutions, and financial management concepts in a global context.
